How to plan the perfect shower enclosure for your bathroom.

If you're planning to renovate or remodel a bathroom, you'll want to choose a shower enclosure that's right for the style of the room.

The good news, there's a shower enclosure for every space, taste and lifestyle – from a stand alone cubicle to a wetroom.

In this guide, you'll find expert advice on making the most of a spacious bathroom and how a shower enclosure can open up a small bathroom. Plus, we'll discuss what shower enclosure works best for sloping ceilings.

For a large bathroom

The luxury of a larger bathroom gives you the freedom and flexibility to choose your dream shower.

If you've got relaxation and pampering in mind when refreshing your bathroom, wetrooms are a popular choice and will create a super-chic, on-trend bathroom look.

Wetrooms are a type of shower without an enclosure. They have an open, fully tiled shower space, where the floor is on a slight gradient to allow the water to drain fully. As the shower area is not fully enclosed, water can escape so it's important the room is designed with this in mind. Wetrooms are generally easier to clean as you have less features to worry about.

We offer a range of clean, streamlined designs, for you to create your own spa-inspired bathroom. Take a look at our wetrooms and shower enclosures for larger bathrooms today.

For a small bathroom

Start your busy mornings feeling relaxed and organised – even in the smallest of bathrooms.

The type of shower enclosure can have a big impact on a small bathroom. If you're limited on space, here are a few things you'll want to consider:

Shower doors

You'll want to think about how the shower door opens. Sliding doors, bifold doors and inifold doors won't require any extra room, so you'll have more space for your morning routine.

Shower screen

A glass panel can make a compact bathroom feel light and airy. A frameless enclosure will also make the space look less busy and help to create an illusion of a bigger space.

Shower placement

Installing a shower in the corner of the room will help to free-up floor space in a busy bathroom. You can install just about any shower enclosure into the corner of a bathroom; and you're not short of options at MERLYN, we offer both quadrant shower enclosures and corner shower enclosures. These options are a simple, yet smart way to maximise a narrow space.

Fitting a shower enclosure with limited space doesn't mean you have to compromise on style or design. Whether you're working with a downstairs bathroom, attic or loft conversion, find out exactly how to master a small bathroom here.

For a sloping ceiling/loft space

Fitting a shower enclosure where there's a sloping ceiling, typically in a loft or attic conversion, can be a daunting task.

---

The tricky shape and head height can be difficult to work with, but that doesn't mean you have to compromise on style or quality. It's important you don't waste space under eaves by trying to squeeze in a small enclosure.

A smart solution is to fit a bespoke shower enclosure that's made specifically for the shape and size of your bathroom.

Our experts can create a shower enclosure that works precisely for you and help you make the most of the space you have. We know that not all off-the-shelf showers suit everyone and every home, so we offer a unique service that considers your space, taste and lifestyle. We'll work with you from start to finish, and help you design a high quality, custom-made shower enclosure that meets your needs.
